Idaho Business Review this week named its 2023 50 Women of the Year honorees, a remarkable array of talented entrepreneurs and leaders spanning all industries and professions.

This year's awards gala, which takes place Thursday Sept. 14 at Boise Centre, will celebrate women leaders from all over the state who have made their mark and are paving the way for leaders of today and into the future.

"The Idaho Business Review has been recognizing the achievements of professional women for 18 years now and I am excited to be able to honor these 50 amazing women from across the state" said Idaho Business Review Publisher Cindy Suffa.

The winners were chosen from 124 nominations submitted this year. IBR's judges pored over the hundreds of letters of recommendation for the nominees. The judges reviewed the applicants themselves before selecting to the 50 honorees based on four categories: professional achievement, leadership, mentorship and community service.

Each year, the Idaho Business Review announces an overall top winner as the Woman of the Year (based on scores from the judges and Idaho Business Review staff members), who is unveiled at the awards gala and introduced by the former year's winner. Last year's Woman of the Year was Idaho Power CEO, Lisa Grow.

The honorees are also invited to a special meet-and-greet reception, where they have an opportunity to mingle with past recipients – networking together, reconnecting and/or forming new friendships.

Tickets for the 2023 gala are available on IBR's website at: <https://idahobusinessreview.com/event/woy/>
(<https://idahobusinessreview.com/event/woy/>)

The honorees will be featured in a commemorative magazine to be distributed at the awards event and then released to subscribers on Sept. 15.
